ALASKA MUST HAVE "QUEEN OF ROADS"

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Ernest Walker Sawyer, an earnest student of the development possibilities for Alaska, has clear ideas about the future of the great territory up north. Not so long ago Secretary Roper of President Roosevelt's cabinet asked what he could do to help Alaska, and Sawyer, who was formerly Assistant Secretary of the Interior, made some timely suggestions as to what is needed. As might be expected from one who had reached definate conclusions after several years of intensive study and travel, the project of the construction of the Alaska Highway was put first among his suggestions. He pointed out:

The project which today holds first place from every angle is the Alaska Highway. It will add people permanently to the pop ulation of the Territory and in addition will bring in hundreds of dollars annually from the visitors.

Fairbanks, Anchorage, Seward, Valdez and Cordova will benefit directly very materially, and the Alaska Railroad will earn a profit. Juneau and Ketchikan will also benefit much by reason of the prosperity and the increased territorial incomes.

There are two smaller road projects of material merit—the Anchorage-Matanuska road and the Seward missing link. The existing appropriations for these projects should be doubled.

Roads have a particular appeal to the imagination. When the mind reverts to ancient times, inseparably connected with the grandeur of Rome, a mental image of the Appian Way comes up as often, or perhaps oftener, than that of the Colosseum. A gigantic architectural pile is awe-inspiring, it must be admitted, but there is something more to a mighty highway extending for miles that is peculiarly a symbol of civilization.

The earliest roads about which anything definate is known are those of Rome, and of those the most celebrated was the Appian Way. In solidity of construction Roman roads have never been excelled and many of them still remain after hundreds of years.

Livy tells of the "via" being begun 312 years before Christ. It was completed about two hundred years later with a total length of 350 miles. As classical students have noted, the course of the Appian Way is described by Horace, and another writer call it the Queen of Roads. The pavement, which rested upon several prepared substrata, was formed by large blocks of hard stone fitted to each otner with great exactness.

Lack of roads or bad roads cannot be tolerated now that we have advanced so far in the application of scientific principles to the construction of highways. Macadam, Telford and others were pioneers in insisting on the use of carefully prepared materials and the adoption of a uniform cross section of moderate curvature. Tremendous strides have been made in recent years, as is well known, in the art of road building.

From the economic point of view, with the reasonable possibility that at least 6,000,000 persons can make a living in developing the mineral and agricultural resources of the 500,000 square miles of Alaska, the highway is an urgent necessity. I can think of no public work that surpasses it in urgency. Whatever money is advanced by the federal government will be returned many fold. It can be denominated in all fairness as a highly desirable loan, a humane loan, giving almost countless citizens an opportunity to develop to the full self-reliance, the highest of all virtues.

SUPERVISORS IN MONDAY SESSION HEAR PROTESTS

Report Of Sera Employment Meets Objections From Several Citizens

MUCH OTHER BUSINESS

The County Board of Supervisors were told at their meeting on Monday that welfare investigators, employed in relief work, must have certain specified training, the exact nature of which has not as yet been made clear by any explanation of the necessary qualifications so far presented.

According to J. C. Byrne, field representative of SERA in northern California, there are no citizens of San Mateo County, found as yet, who are qualified to do this work.

As a result, outside investigators must be brought into the county and take jobs held by residents in order that these requirements may be met and the work properly carried on.

Byrne and members of the county relief committee, headed by Robert J. Koshland, its chairman, appeared before the supervisors, and Byrne made the above explanation.

The declaration did not seem to meet with the approval of Mrs. Ella Chase of Lomita Park, who voiced the view that it seemed little less than a miracle that out of a population of 80,000 people of average intelligence, resident in this county, there are none who could qualify for any of these social welfare investigating jobs. She pointed out that local persons had carried on this work ably for many years before the present policy was adopted by the committee. Other citizens expressed similar sentiments.

Byrne declared that the committee apparently was unable to find any such qualified workers in San Mateo County and, therefore, it was necessary to bring in outsiders to fill these positions. He said further: "Social

COMMENDATION FOR JUDGE W. H. CLAY

The following article is reprinted from the Richmond Banner, dated Friday, November 30:

When Wade H. Clay, attorney-at law, was president of the Park-Presido Improvement Association he presided with so much dignity that many of his colleagues affectionately nicknamed him "judge."

Today Wade H. Clay is a real judge. At the election this month he was chosen judge for the first San Mateo township, which runs from Daly City through South San Francisco.

Judge Clay attended the Tuesday meeting of the local improvement club, although he says he is very busy. It is not bootleggers that keep a suburban judge busy these days but city speeders.

So if you travel too fast on the Bay Shore highway and the motorcycle man tells you to "tell it to the judge" expect to find Judge Clay dignified and not "just another pal."

TOWNSEND PLAN MEET AT CITY HALL

The council chamber of the Daly City hall was the scene of an enthusiastic meeting of the Townsend Old Age Persion Plan organization. P. G. Selmi, as chairman of the Daly City Unit, expressed his desire to put his efforts toward promoting a monster mass meeting in the near future, providing he receives the proper co-operation of the entire membership.

A presentation of the plan in all its phases was made by Dr. B. Green, who is a medical lecturer and an ardent supporter of the Townsend Plan because of its humanitarian aspect and its sound economic value. Dr. Green said he believes public officials are doing all they possibly can to relieve us of our economic troubles, but without the co-operation of the public there can be no solution. A plan must be devised with proof that a great majority of the entire population approves it before we can hope for better times.

The committee advises that if you want to know what the Townsend Plan proposes, and how it will assure you of better times, watch for the announcement of the date and place of the monster mass meeting for the Townsend Old Age Revolving Pension Plan and be in attendance.

We suspect that the plan to coin more silver dollars is backed by the suspender trust.

Mrs. Mary Vleerick of Los Angeles is the house guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. J. L. MacCarthy of Bellevue avenue.

GAME IS WON BY DALY CITY TEAM

Superb Pitching By Local Twirler Responsible For Exciting Contest

(By "Moe" Plansky)

The local pitching ace, Pat Holmes, had the usually strong hitting Sunset Scavengers ball team at his mercy Sunday afternoon at the Club House Diamond in San Francisco. Young Holmes allowed only five scattered hits, of which three were collected by Belletto, but no runner advanced beyond second base.

Regis, the Daly City third sacker, accepted eleven chances, many of which were labeled for safeties; but, as usual, this youngster completed many plays for which he is noted.

Both Holmes and Regis collected three hits, besides contributing to the victory by their masterly pitching and fielding.

Young Hughie Smith celebrated his return to the local nine by collecting two bingles, one a triple, and making one of the most spectacular catches seen around these parts in many moons.

The entire local team played errorless ball throughout the game, and their timely hitting materially aided their pitcher in scoring a victory.

"Well, here's a man we believe to be a murderer, in intention, at least, and we are leaving three defenseless woman with him." Wilton looked at his companions searchingly. "How are we to proceed? To get Berenice away without accusing Gordon Haskell is to arouse all the engines of the law to support his guardianship. To accuse him is to bring on ourselves the burden of proof. I can't even prove that Balder wanted to take my life. You saw him threateningly above me—but for all you could hear he might have been talking to me on the waste water power in Lostland ravine—or on apple culture. We're in a tight box ourselves."

"Ought we to tell the authorities what we suspect?"

"We can't have him arrested. He didn't push the Bracebridge children into the whirl—and we have absolutely no proof, except the word of Balder, that he was instrumental in the tragery—its initiator, its capitalist, so to speak."

"It may be a strange sentiment," Wilton remarked, "but I have a distinct aversion to Berenice's knowing that her brothers and sisters were killed—the added dreadfulness of realizing that their murderer was her father's confidant—her trusted guardian! We want him to give her up. Yet if we have a weapon strong enough to make him relinquish her, we have one which reacts on our own conscience. We have to accuse him publicly."

There was no gainsaying this.

"It's like looking at a murder out of the tail of one's eye—isn't it?" remarked Arthur. "Knowing some one has passed a window—when you half see him." He glanced through the window, looked again with a blank expression that gradually changed to distinct horror.

"Wilton, Jerry," he whispered, "there's a man—looks like Haskell—coming up the lane. Blow out the lamp."

CHAPTER X

They sat close together in semi-darkness, only the red-hot plates of the stove showing like disks of vermilion in the gloom. "You and Mr. Fleming go into the bedroom," Jerry whispered. "He's comin'. He's comin' right to the door."

"Keep him talking, Jerry—just as long as you can. We'll slip out and go down to the academy, and see if everything is all right there. Keep him talking until we get a start."

"You bet I will! In there with you!"

Behind the door they listened, holding their very breaths in the suspense of the moment. At last came two short raps and Haskell's voice, quite thin and hollow and weary.

"You all alone, Jerry?"

"Here I am all alone in the old kitchen." Jerry evaded with his usual hatred of a lie. "What's the matter, Haskell? You look as if you'd seen a ghost."

"I'm worn out! I've been hunting Balder. Do you know where he is?"

"Do I know where Balder is? How should I know where he is?"

"I thought he might be up here, passing the time of day."

"He is not—where did you see him last?"

"He told me he was going up the ravine to look for an ax he left up there—and he hasn't come back! And I need him!"

"That's a pity," Jerry said dryly. "Maybe he is still up in the ravine. Maybe he thought he'd camp there for the night."

"Are you mad?" they heard Haskell say. "Don't talk folly."

"Other people have camped up there—little camps with flagpoles close to the whirl."

"What are you driving at?"

"Nothing! Take a seat and warm yourself."

"I'm quite warm—the fact is, I've been having a bonfire burning up rubbish back of the old church."

"You don't say! Boxes and the—like?"

"Several things that ought to have been burned long ago. They're gone now, thank heaven. Jerry, I've broken the will; I've burned the four wax figures."

"When did you do that?"

"This evening—I had them carried down back of the church; the old man who drives for me helped. Berenice and Miss Mercer were in their rooms, and Fleming went for a long walk. So it was a good chance. I did right, Jerry. They've been too long a blight over the old house. Now they're gone, maybe the pupils will come back. It will be a relief to walk down that corridor in the dim light and know they're not in that room, and wake up in the morning and know they are not at their eternal study. Always studying! Now that's over."

"Don't be nervous, Haskell. I suppose you done what your conscience told you to. After all, they was only wax figures—wasn't like killin' human beings."

They heard confused sounds—then, "Get me water, quick—it's my heart."

The dipper splashed in the water pail. "I'm better," came a murmur. "But I'll rest here. Jerry. I am very tired. Life comes to an end suddenly. All you worked for is like a rope of sand falling from you with every turn you make. It's bleak in the hills, Jerry—and that old academy is like a prison! I'll rest awhile, if you don't mind."

"Rest all you want. The night's long."

In the next room Arthur and Wilton looked at each other and knew the moment had come.

"Does that window go up easy?" Arthur whispered.

For answer Wilton raised it. Arthur stepped through and Wilton followed, reclosing the window softly. Once in the road they breathed more freely.

"You heard him say he has burnt the figures?"

"Yes—what do you think that means?"

"I believe he couldn't stand them another moment. He doesn't know what's happened up in the ravine—and he's nervous, naturally; wanders around as people do when they are nervous."

"Get Me Water, Quick. It's My Heart."

"Shall we tell Berenice and Janet about Balder?" Arthur asked.

"Not tonight—anyway. If we can manage, I am for taking the three women up to Jerry's tonight."

They were approaching the old church. The remains of the bonfire lay like a great red eye sinking into the earth—throwing a light on the stark wall of the building.

"Let us warm ourselves a moment."

"Not at that fire."

But they paused by it, nevertheless, their faces taking on the crimson glow, their weary bodies drooping a little. Ground wind fanned a few twigs into temporary life, and the whirling, wild little sparks went by them—went out. "What's this?"

Arthur stooped over. "A bit of blue sash! Here—I'll poke it into the embers. I feel as if I had been witnessing a holocaust of innocence. Let's get away from this horrible place."

"With all my heart. I believe there's wax sticking to my shoes."

They hurried up the hill. As usual, two lights burned on the gate posts of the great entrance gate. This they found securely locked. With the aid of a rail from a near-by fence they scaled the wall, kicking the rail down as they went. "Some one is in the drawing room. Look in, Wilton."

"All three are there—Mrs. Denver and Berenice and Janet. That's fortunate."

Arthur came to the window—and, viewing the picture inside, felt its contrast to the wild events of the afternoon and evening. The two girls were seated by the fire, close together, as if for mutual comfort.

"Ring and knock, both, Wilton. There! they've heard you. Mrs. Denver rises! Good! I hope our revered schoolmaster is still quailing under Jerry's arrows."

The girls ran into the hall—Berenice straight to Wilton—delighted, alarmed, all concern for him.

"You shouldn't be here! He'll be very angry—but I am so glad to see you. Are you very cold? Come in by the fire. I only got up today."

"We know where Mr. Haskell is," said Arthur. "Calling on Jerry. It's very fine and cheerful, Janet, but I don't think Wilton should be so clearly viewed from the porch out there. Mr. Haskell may be back any moment."

They stood irresolute. "Why don't you go down in the kitchen?" Mrs. Denver suggested. "I'll keep watch. The basement door is open. Mr. Payne could slip out that way."

"Will Mr. Haskell come in the front door?"

"He usually does."

"You won't be afraid—alone on this floor?"

"I am only afraid of Balder."

Wilton went closer to her and whispered: "Do not speak of it—Balder was drowned in the whirl this afternoon. Mr. Haskell will be told in the morning when we send men to look for the body."

She gazed at him—for the moment speechless. "How did it happen?"

"He lost his footing."

"So the whirl got him," she murmured, "the whirl got him."

"Why do you say that?"

"He was always saying in the kitchen that the whirl would get him some day. He liked to talk of it. 'But it'll get others first,' he used to add."

Give the Little Folks Hand Crochet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MAYBE you will and maybe you won't have time to crochet one or the other of the cunning garments here pictured before Christmas, but where there is a will to do and dare why not "get busy" and find a way? Really, can you think of anything to hang on the Christmas tree that will bring greater joy to the heart of a child than either of these cunning hand-crochet frocks or the gay coatee with it's jaunty matching beret?

Anyway what if you do not see your way clear to finish before the holidays, a gift as adorable as this will be hailed with delight any day on the calender. Being done in sturdy mercerized crochet cotton, apparel like this is an all-year-round proposition so far as timely wearableness is concerned. Either little dress will be charming to wear to parties this winter, made in a dark or a pastel color, and being washable they will emerge from their tubbing all ready to wear when spring and summer comes.

To "brighten the corner where you are" is no task for a little girl dressed for a party in the hand-crochet dress of bright yellow pearl cotton (centered in the group). The skirt is a series of crochet-lace ruffles done in shell mesh stitch, matching the round collar and slightly puff sleeves. Each ruffle, and about the neck and sleeves, is tipped with white. There is no wear-out to a dress of this mercerized cotton.

The simple little slip of a frock on the lovable child seated is easier to make and takes less time to complete than the one just described. Any little girl would be proud of this Sunday-go-to-meeting dress of mercerized crochet cotton. There will never be any trouble in persuading a young lady to hurry and get dressed if she can tumble into this pretty little frock. Make it in any color you choose, for mercerized crochet cotton comes in dozens and dozens of delectable tones and tints from dark to light.

Perhaps you think a gift of jacket-sweater with matching beret would be more apropos for the youngster you have in mind. The two-piece ensemble in the picture is easily made of knitting and crochet cotton. It is a question whether it is more effective in navy, brown or wine-red. The embroidery which adds so vastly to its attractiveness is done in a lazy-daisy stitch—the easiest, quickest decorative stitch known in needle arteraft. Don't forget the cluster of lazy-daisies which tops the crown of the beret.

There now! We have told you about crochet for little folks but have you seen the stunning triangle scarfs crocheted or knitted of mercerized cotton in the color you like best, which make such acceptable gifts for grown-ups? They are bordered on two sides with hand-tied fringe just as are the silk fabric or velvet ones which are making such a hit in neckwear displays this year.

BIAS-CUT CLOTHES POPULAR IN PARIS

There is much more give and take in our new clothes judging from the numbers of things brought out on the bias.

Sleeves are set into shoulders biasly, or very often sleeves and yoke, coming down in a design back and front, appear on short jackets as well as three-quarter and full-length coats, and on dresses themselves.

Another 1934 winter notion is the use of solid color in two and three-piece suits with the splash of color coming in a short scarf about one yard long and six to ten inches wide. This is knotted rather close at the throat and the ends are sometimes tucked in or else they are tucked through tabs that button or fasten on the back of the lapels of the jacket or coat.

Long Slender Tunics in Latest Afternoon Models

Elaborate afternoon models this season show long, slender tunics, almost following in style the three-quarter or seven-eighth coat. These tunics are always in contrasting material and tone. They are noted in faconne rayon crepe, lame and rayon, ottoman and faille, to accompany dull velvet costumes. Marcel Rochas shows elaborate tunics in lame, chenille material, tufted fabrics, quilted crepe and in beaded or spangled fabrics, to accompany his smart ensembles combining a mixture of wool and slit cellulose film.

Dresses, Tight to Knees, Now Develop Into Train

Lucien Lelong shows evening dresses extremely close-fitted in front and at back down to the knees, where, through a clever cut, it develops into a long graceful train. Molyneux obtains train effects by adding at the back of his evening dresses a sort of second hem, which is sewn under the edge of the long skirt and allowed to fall on the ground. Some of these trains in hem effect are entirely covered with plastic sequins, forming a contrasting appearance with the dull rayon satins or crepe of the dress.

SWISH OF TAFFETA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Again the swish of taffeta resounds in fashion's realm. Especially during the romantic evening hours does the murmuring of its rustle make music in the air. What's more "they say" that taffeta will be a very important fabric both in winter resort and early spring modes. The dance frock pictured is of deep blue celanese taffeta. A huge bow of self-taffeta at the neck and a pronounced flare of fullness from the knee carry this lovely and youthful gown to a point of high distinction.

Snappy Buttons

This is a year of snappy buttons as seen in new collections. Some dressmakers show no other fastening or buttoning than large plastic clips.

Two Stanford stars, Bob Reynolds, tackle, and Bob Grayson, fullback, have been named on practically every all-American so far.

San Francisco is to test a new kind of road surfacing. A part of Sixth street has been designated for the experiment, which consists of an iron road. Trucks will be requested to use the thoroughfare as much as possible.

The new trial for Judson Doke, accused of murdering his wife's lover, has been opened at Woodland. A panel of 87 men and 13 women have been drawn as prospective jurors.

Death took a real holiday in Los Angeles Thanksgiving Day when not a single person was killed in an auto accident. This record contrasted well with the 15 deaths of the year before.

An unbalanced state relief condition is found by Dr. N. Gregory Silvermaster, SERA research and survey director. He says that one-seventh of the population of the six major counties of southern California are on relief. Only about one-twelfth of the population of eight northern and central California counties are on relief. Seventy per cent of the state relief load is south of the Tehachapi.

Returning from Chicago, San Francisco's mayor, Angelo Rossi, brings with him a new plan for jobless relief. It calls for a survey of employers and unemployed to determine the needs of the first and the qualifications of the latter. Quotas of unemployed would then be assigned to various industries to be absorbed as soon as possible. Whether or not the Mayor plans to adopt this plan in his city is undetermined.

Senator-elect John Steven McGroarty is leaving for Washington where he will plea for fire and flood protection of Los Angeles, which, he declared, "like ancient Babylon, is in danger of being buried by the mountains washing down upon the city." California's poet laureate will take motion pictures with him of the Montrose-La Crescenta flood to further his campaign.

First it was Marin County's sea serpent which proved to be a hoax. Now it is an undersea volcano. Investigating geologists proved that the "lava" which was found floating near Stinson Beach did not come from some subterranean volcano but was merely refuse from a nearby clay kiln.

Gazing for the first time in seven years upon her husband who was declared legally dead several weeks ago, Mrs. Ramona Charles sobbed hysterically, "Oh, it's he, there's no doubt of it!" Recently Mrs. Charles attempted to collect $55,000 in insurance on her husband, missing for seven years. Special investigators found him.

Extra police protection was given school busses in Los Angeles as a result of increased activities of striking carmen. While Mayor Shaw attempted to arbitrate union men and employers, street cars were being stalled, passengers terrorized and air released from car brakes. Spectators enjoyed watching the miniature riots when they were not ducking bricks or flying glass.

While a reopening of the David Lamson case looms, Dolores Roberts Sorenson, prominent figure in the famous murder trial, has filed suit for divorce, charging her husband with desertion and non-support. She asserted that he left her soon after the wedding and has failed to contribute to the support either of herself or her son. Mrs. Sorenson was the Lamson maid prior to the tragic death of Mrs. Lamson.

During the late election Santa Barbara voted "No" on a $120,000 bond issue for watershed construction. Officials grew anxious about the city's future. The Federal government had planned to share expenses in the project but at first would not contribute if the city could not put up money. Santa Barbara is elated to hear, however, that the government plans immediate allotment of $166,000 as the first step in rehabilitation of the proposed $3,000,000 Gibraltar-Juncal watershed.

GIVES CHANCE TO COMBINE FABRICS

PATTERN 9135

A two-piece frock is nice for a number of reasons, one of the best being that it affords such an excellent opportunity for the combination of different fabrics. Take this design—you can make it entirely of wool with just buttons and a belt buckle for trimming, or you can make it with, for instance, a plaid wool skirt and a plain velveteen blouse, repeating one of the most attractive shades in the plaid. However you make it up, the well-cut skirt with its smart kick-pleats and the becoming lines of the blouse will appear to advantage!

Pattern 9135 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3 yards 54 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York City.

Racing Enthusiasts Talk Take Reduction

By J. W. MARCHBANK

From all sides warnings are being sounded that a return must be made to the highest ideals of sportsmanship to save racing. Significantly, the suggestions are along the line I have been advocating for many months, that of a reduction in the amount of money the state and the racing associations take out of the pari mutuel pools. All of the ideas are set forth in a friendly spirit and by true friends of the great sport.

Jouett Shouse, of national fame in political circles, recently said:

"Racing must be regarded as a sport and racing must be directed as a sport and not as a highly profitable commercial enterprise. Cupidity, unwisdom and knavery have destroyed racing in the past and, as surely as we live, they will destroy racing wherever they are allowed to hold sway. At least in some sections, racing is being seriously overdone, and I contend that unless there is a curtailment of the length of meetings and A REDUCTION OF THE PERCENTAGE TAKEN FROM PATRONS THROUGH PARI MUTUEL BETTING, racing will continue to suffer seriously in the future as in striking instances it has suffered during the past year or two."

These are wise words from an insider; Jouett Shouse has been for some time an associate of Desha Breckinridge, editor of the Lexington Herald, in the ownership of a well known stable.

J. A. Estes, associate editor of the Blood Horse, speaks right out in a late number of Thomas B. Cromwell's weekly, as follows:

"It is money which has made racing so attractive to state governments in the last few months, and by that token it is money which constitutes the greatest danger to the proper continuance of racing."

In the Thoroughbred Record, also published in the Blue Grass, Vernon Sanders has his say:

"Big takes from the people and small purses will quickly impoverish the players and the horsemen."

In California it is imperative that the commission on the pari mutuel pools be reduced from twelve to nine per cent.

Answer: Japan.

Question: What is the probable origin of the American Indian?

Answer: No one really knows, but it is believed by many scientists that they are descendants from tribes of Central and Northeastern Asia, for the groups resemble each other in certain physical characteristics. They are supposed to have reached this continent by way of Bering Strait or farther south by a passage which has now disappeared.

Question: Who were the first children ever to hear the story of Cinderella?

Answer: Long before the Christian era a version of the story of Cinderella was learned by the Egyptians, and they wrote it in strange native characters for their children to read.

Question: What famous poem was written by an American boy when he was only seventeen?

Answer: "Thanatopsis," by William Cullen Bryant.

Question: Why did Samuel L. Clemens choose "Mark Twain" for a pen name?

Answer: Clemens was at one time a pilot on a river steamboat, and it is probable that during this period he chose his pen name, for "mark twain" was a frequent call of the sounder to indicate that the water was two fathoms deep.

Question: How did a flock of geese once save a city from destruction?

Answer: In the year 390 B. C. the Romans were attacked by the Gauls, a fierce northern tribe of people. Finally driven to their last place of refuge, a steep, rocky hill known as the Capitol, they prepared to withstand a long siege. One night, as the consul Manlius lay sleeping beside his sword, near the temple of Juno, where were kept the sacred geese, he was awakened by a clamorous outburst of hissing and cackling. Grasping his sword, Manlius rushed to the walls of the fortress and discovered that his enemies had climbed up the steep rock sand were about to storm the citadel. Then the other Romans, also awakened by the clamor of the frightened fowls, hurried from their sleeping places to defend the city. Thus the Gauls were completely routed and Rome was saved.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importanec for health protection and a list of all contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

A Milk Angle

The value of milk as an article of diet for adults is not fully appreciated by the public. In the matter of protein and calcium alone, it probably justifies its present cost. In its entirety it is a more complete food than any other material, besides being the source of the different milk products. The average inside worker would be much better fortified against everyday wear and tear by the consumption of even a moderate amount of milk daily. The natural vigor and stamina of the outside worker, in a measure, precludes this necessity.

The per capita consumption of milk, upon a check up in San Mateo County, is low—about one-half pint daily. This should be increased by at least one-third. In some places the milk consumption is even double this figure, which not only adds to the well being of the populace, but promotes a more even temperament where there is a balance of all nutritional elements. The bony frame, teeth and nerves require a daily supply of calcium and phosphorus which is poorly supplied in the ordinary diet except by a daily ration of milk.

The perishable property of milk makes it, in a measure, a difficult industry to handle. A break in one of the links of precaution can make this life giving fluid dangerous, so the recent tendency to have all milk for human consumption above suspicion has added to the cost to the producer; in fact, the production of wholesome and pure milk is not alone an agricultural and economic problem, but is justly recognized as a health problem.

There is a very recent belief by dietitians that the daily use of milk by adults adds to human longevity; therefore, the theory of the sour milk bacillus adding to the length of years of the Bulgarian peasantry might be more easily due to their daily ration of milk, which, after all, gives a maximum of nourishment with a minimum of digestive wear and tear.

The very recent ordinance passed by the San Mateo County Supervisors for the pasteurization of all milk entering the county is certainly a step in the right direction. Too often the public looks upon pasturization as a measure which was adopted years ago to make useable milk which would otherwise have been unfit for human consumption. At present, high grade milk, after pasteurization to safeguard against those slips whcih might occur in production handling and distribution, is such a factor of safety that it can no longer be neglected.

The partial loss of vitamin "C" by this process is so easily made up by the addition of orange juice, tomato juice and, in the case of adults, any of the fruit juices, that there is no ground against this precaution.

REPORTS ON ROADS OF DEAHT VALLEY

The roads all over Death Valley have now dried up and the Park Service is making great efforts to put the system in good travelable condition, acoording to information received by the National Automobile Club.

The Furnace Creek approach road is in very fine condition and the Beatty road into Death Valley, by way of Daylight Pass, is also very good. The east side highway in south Death Valley by Bad Water to Ashford Mills is excellent. The east side road by way of Devil's Golf Course is good, although rough in places. Jubilee Pass entrance from Shoshone is in good condition.

In north Death Valley the main road to Scotty's is now passable, but very rough and visitors are being sent by way of the Stovepipe Wells Hotel road, which is good.

The state highway from Olancha to Lone Pine to the toll road is in very good condition. However, the toll itself is washed over its entire length and very rough, although passable.

The road from Emigrant Springs to Wildrose has received some storm damage, and is washed in places, but still passable. The Dante's View Road is in fine condition. Oiling operations between Furnace Creek boundary and Stovepipe Wells Hotel will begin shortly.

Bad Shifting

Many motorists fall into the habit of shifting from low gear to high, skipping second gear altogether, while others are prone to start in second rather than low, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Either practice is bad because of undue wear on the clutch, drive line, and rear axle assembly.

Protect Varnish

Dust or dirt should never be rubbed off a varnished surface, as gritty particles may scratch the finish, acording to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. A varnished finish is best cleaned by dusting with a soft wool cloth or washing with cold water.

TELEPHONE IN HOME SAVES LIVES OF FAMILY OF FIVE

Because Franklin Dart, of Milwaukee, Wis., had a telephone in his home, he, his wife, their two young sons and his wife's sister are alive today. One morning not long ago, Mr. Dart roused himself from a coma and found carbon monoxide gas was escaping from a coal heater. He crawled to the telephone and managed to call the fire department, then collapsed. A rescue squad which responded found all five members of the family unconscious, but the application of artificial respiration revived them.

NEWS LETTER TO SALESMEN

The improvement in industrial activity which began about mid-September continues to be maintained. For the week ended November3, the New York Times Weekly Business Index stood at 75.6 compared with 75.3 the previous week and with 72.5 for the comparable week last year. This marks the first time in five months that the Index has crossed last year's level. Railroad carloadings led the advance, followed by steel mill activity, cotton cloth output, and a nominal rise in lumber production. Electric power production eased off slightly, while automobile production declined sharply, largely because of model change-overs.

Meanwhile, November is off to a decidedly good start in retail trade, according to Dun and Bradstreet. Volume thus far, day against day, is running 7 per cent to 12 per cent larger than a year ago in department and women's specialty shops, with a far higher percentage average for retail sales as a whole. As a result, wholesale buying has also spurted forward.

From various current sources comes the news that business men are cheerfully looking forward to the best holiday trade in three or four years.

Confidence in the forward march of recovery is indicated by the tabulation of the Standard Statistics Company showing nearly $120,000,000 in capital expenditures either undertaken or planned since the first of this year by nineteen companies. Major industries represented in this move toward expansion include automobiles, chemicals, steel and oil.

A marked expansion in building operations throughout the country is revealed in the latest survey compiled by Dun and Bradstreet for the 215 cities, including New York, regularly reporting. As against a normal seasonable increase of about 2.5 per cent, the volume of permits taken out during October for new buildings, alterations, additions and repairs, showed a rise of 40.9 per cent over September. Except for last May, the October total was the largest since April, 1932, and represented a gain of 42.9 per cent over October, 1933. This upturn brought the total estimated value of permits for the first ten months of this year to $299,751,129, compared with $260,739,318 for the same period last year, an increase of 15 per cent.

The value of department store sales in October of this year increased 11 per cent over October 1933, the Federal Reserve Board reports. For the first ten months of this year, as compared with last year, a 13 per cent increase is estimated for the country as a whole. Every Federal Reserve district showed improved sales for this period. In the Boston district, the gain was 6 per cent; in New York, 7 per cent; in Philadelphia, 9 per cent; in Cleveland, 17 per cent; in Richmond, 18 per cent; in Atlanta, 28 per cent; in Chicago, 19 per cent St. Louis, 17 per cent; Minneapolis, 10 per cent; Kansas City, 17 per cent, Dallas, 24 per cent; San Francisco, 9 per cent.

Further evidence of improved business activity is the fact that post office receipts for fifty of the largest cities, which are regularly represented, increased 17 per cent from September to October this year. A seasonable increase is usual between these two months, but last year's gain was only 9 per cent October, 1934, receipts were 11 per cent higher than for October, 1933.

News from the steel front is also encouraging. According to the preliminary report of the American Institute of Steel Construction shipments of fabricated structural steel for October were the largest for any month this year, 64 per cent larger than the monthly average during the first half of the year. Meanwhile, steel ingot production increased 17 per cent in October over September. Last year there was a drop of 9 per cent in the comparable period. However, the October, 1934, figure was still about 30 per cent lower than for October 1933, but the spread between the two years was smaller than at any time since July.

The total production of anthracite in October was about 19 per cent higher than in September. Last year, October production declined about 6 per cent under the September total. Bituminous coal production, also increased in October, registering a gain of 17.5 per cent over September. Last year, the increase for the month was one-half of one per cent. Compared with October, 1933, anthracite coal production last month showed a gain of about 8 per cent and bituminous coal production a gain of about 10 per cent.

Silk deliveries to factories increased 50 per cent from September to October this year, compared with a 9 per cent drop last year, and October, 1934, production was 72 per cent larger than for October, 1933.

An encouraging report on conditions during the first nine months of this year, as compared with the same period last year, was delivered by Secretary of Commerce Roper last week. He cited a gain of 46 per cent in automobile production; 22 per cent in cement production; 19 per cent in iron and steel production; 19 per cent in factory employment; 36 per cent in factory payrolls; 11 per cent in variety store sales; 26 per cent in rural general store sales.

Secretary Roper also noted decline of 17 per cent in textile production during this period, and a decline of eight-tenths of one per cent in the production of boots and shoes. Other favorable factors, however, included an increase of 22 per cent in industrial consumption of electric power; 9 per cent in freight carloadings; 13 per cent in hotel rooms occupied. Futhermore, exports gained 44 per cent; imports 19 per cent; stock prices based on an average of 421 leading companies, increased 20 per cent; and bond prices, based on 60 per cent representative issues, improved 14 per cent.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Convicted Of Conspiracy: A jury in the Federal Court of the Eastern District of New York, at Brooklyn, recently found the Schechter Bros., operating two live poultry concerns, guilty of conspiracy to violate the National Industrial Recovery Act. It was the first verdict of guilty returned on a conspiracy charge. The jury also upheld the contention of the Federal Government that alleged violations of the Act were in transactions affecting interstate commerce. No jury had passed upon this question before. Judge Marcus Campbell has sentenced the four brothers to jail periods of from one to three months, and levied fines against them amounting to $7425.

NRA Wins 67 Out Of 73 Cases: The Litigation Division reports that between September 15 and November 1, it appeared as counsel in seventy-three Federal Court actions. In all but six cases, the action was favorable to the government. Four of the six unfavorable decisions, involving the lumber and timber products code in Mississipi, were rendered by the same judge. Two important cases resulted in permanent injunctions issued against two New York concerns charged with violating the wage, hour and label provisions of the Dress Manufacturing Industry Code. The defendants, the Fair Waist and Dress Company, and Lombardy Frocks, Inc., each deposited certified checks for $12,500 to cover restitution of back wages to employes. This latest report continues the proportion of favorable decisions at above 90 per cent since the division was created last March.

Code Administration Studied: Three deputy administrators have left Washington to confer with local code authorities in fifteen major cities. The aim is to secure suggestions as to how to co-ordinate and effect economies in local code administration; how to eliminate the multiple assessment problem; what further assistance, if any, NRA should give local code authorities in the conduct of code administration. From suggestions already received from the field, an outline to be used as a basis of discussion has been prepared, which is being laid before the regional group conferences. These groups are being asked to comment and to contribute their own proposals. As a result of these conferences NRA hopes to formulate a program for the consideration of the National Code Authorities involved.

Automobile Manufacturing Code Extended: The President has extended the code for this industry without change until February 1, 1935, and has announced his intention to institute a study into the possibilities of employment stabilization in the industry. The President's statement, in part, read: "The manufacturers themselves have taken important steps since I first discussed the subject with them some months ago. In addition to what they have done and are doing in omitting their national shows and staggering the introduction of new models, I believe that we should develope further facts on the seasonable peaks and valleys of production in their bearing upon employment. I have not asked the manufacturers to agree that such an inquiry should be made. I have thought it better to bring the inquiry about under my executive powers." The President expressed the hope that both labor and management would consider with an open mind the suggestions which may arise out of the inquiry.

Note For Consumers: Of Special interest to the consumer is a recent amendment to the code for the handkerchief industry, containing new provisions against misleading labels. Hereafter, "seconds," unless plainly marked, must not be sold in sealed packages; and handkerchiefs cannot be labeled "linen" unless the linen in the fabric constitutes, by thread count, at least 80 per cent of the material. In products where the major fiber is less than 80 per cent of the fabric, the exact percentage must be "prominently indicated" on the label. Handkerchiefs bearing the term "pure linen" are already regulated by Federal Trade Commission requirements.

Shorter Week For Millinery Industry: An amended code for the millinery industry has been aproved, effective November 19, which increases minimum wages about 6 per cent and reduces the maximum basic workweek from thirty-seven and one-half hours to a five-day, thirty-five hour week. The amended code grew out of studies and public hearings conducted by the Special Millinery Board, which had been created to observe the operation of the labor provisions in the original code. This board is continued by the amended code and is empowered to recommend modifications or exceptions to the area wage scales and to investigate the effects of the labor provisions and the classification of employes under competitive conditions. A system of apprenticeship, under supervision of the board, is also provided.

Farmer Exempted: NRA has approved an order exempting farmers who sell their own produce direct to the consumer from all provisions of the retail food and grocery code. This action was recommended by the code authority for the trade, and approved by all NRA Boards and Divisions.

To Study Prison Labor Competition: The President's recent executive order establishing the thirty-six hour week in the cotton garment manufacturing industry provided that NRA appoint a committee of three to investigate and report by December 1, 1934, on the competition faced by this industry from prison labor and sheltered workshops. The NIRB has accordingly appointed Judge Joseph N. Ulman, Frank Tannenbaum and W. Jett Lauck to make these studies. Judge Ulman, chairman of the committee, is associate justice of the Supreme bench of Baltimore and prominently identified with prison problems. Mr. Tannebaum is a widely known author and economist. Mr. Lauck, economist and statistician, was one of the members of the committee which recommended the thirty-six hour week amendment to the cotton garment code.

Statistical Bureaus for Coal Industry: An amendment to the bituminous coal code, just approved, provides for more effective means of gathering statistical information necessary for code administration and for studies of wages and prices. It calls for the establishment of statistical bureaus under the Divisional or Subdivisional Code Authorities. Each bureau will be under the direction of a managing director, who may not be an officer, director, or employe of any coal producer. Administration members of the code authorites are empowered to inspect books and records and require reports from producers against whom complaints of violations have been filed. The filing of inaccurate reports or failure to file required reports will be a violation of the code.

Label Review Officer Named: Dean G. Edwards, Senior Deputy Administrator of the Textile Division, has been appointed Label Review Officer for New York, succeeding Edward L. Fries, who has been transferred to the Pacific Coast to continue his successful work in connection with label administration. Mr. Edwards will hear cases involving the withholding of NRA labels by code authorties. He will review the action of the code authorities, with power to stay suspension of labels pending administrative determination in Washington. The apparel industries are the principal users of NRA labels.

Back Pay Restored: The code authority for the Ladies' Handbag Industry reports that between March 14 and October 31 last, it effected wage restitutions amounting to $13,024.22. This sum went to 901 employes, who were not being paid at code wages. In addition, wage deficiencies of $10,200 have been found and efforts are being made to arrange restitution of that sum.

Excluded From Code Authority: NRA Office Order No. 93 provides that no member, officer, agent or employe or representattive of any firm which has ben deprived of the use of NRA insignia shall serve as a member of any code authority (unless and until such use shall have been restored).

OLD HISTORICAL DATA OF THE COLMA VALLEY

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

THORNTON BEACH BOULEVARD

There is no really desirable beach so easy of access to the Colma Valley and a large area of the southwestern portion of San Francisco as would be Thornton Beach were the School street extension built from the intersection of School street and the Junipero Serra boulevard, a distance of about a mile. The beach south from the Cliff House is really marvelous in its amusement specialties, but as a bathing beach it is extremely dangerous. Ingleside has the same objectionable disadvantage, while Thornton Beach is, as has been said in these articles, the only really safe beach for bathing within the vicinity of San Francisco. Therefore, the possibilities of the School street extension cannot be too greatly urged. With the ideal beach for bathing, there would rapidly follow the improvement of the Palisades and soon there would be a marine view residential district that would be far superior to the marine view residential section overlooking Point Lobos, which is far more exposed to fogs than is Thornton Beach. No one can deny that there would be a desirable rush made to Thornton Beach and its Palisades were the facts properly known, a result that would rapidly follow the building of the School street-Thornto Beach boulevard west from the Junipero Serra boulevard.

And at this special time, on account of the almost positive assurance of the Bridge Exposition at Lake Merced in 1938, it is extremely important that "Good Roads Jim Casey's" project that was started twenty-five years ago, and would have long since been completed had not his successor as supervisor uterly abandoned the project after Supervisor Casey had carefully expended $85,000 in grading and bridges.

Ye Old Timer inadvertently omitted last week the names of Hon. John D. Daly and John W. Marchbank in the list of prominent public spirited citizens at the School street extension mass meeting at Colma Hall on November 24, 1909. The two gentlemen named never failed to get behind and boost a worthy project, such as this proposed boulevard will unquestionably prove itself to be.

The Hillcrest waiting room, opposite Dick English's saloon, was the scene of a robbery of an Amazon avenue carpenter of $20. Deputy Constable Leslie was called and he soon lodged the robbers in jail, one being arrested at Hillcrest and the other at Baden. The robber's names were Martin Ferrell and Art Yost, and they were positively identified by the victim.

The Record installed the first telephone from the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company, the number being Mission 2786.

J. S. O'Brien's residence at 515 Green street was the scene of an interesting mass meeting to advocate adoption of the $45,000 school bonds for erecting the Vista Grande and Crocker schools, the election being on December 10, 1909.

Caleb Coakley installed a water main from the Independent Water Company's reservoir to his "Boulevard" road house, and is now well protected from fire.

The county and the United Railroads are jointly putting in a culvert at the intersection Mission road and School street.

When you see it sitting on its tail and howling at the local newspaper, just make up your mind that the truth hurts it.

The report that a woman was being murdered at the Gipsy camp was found to be merely that one of the men had knocked his woman down a few times with a club, on account of which she foolishly screamed.

Two gun toters undertook the robbery of the White House saloon in broad daylight, but were quickly put out of commission by good jolts from Constable Bob Carroll's fists. Bob regarded them as too amateur to be worth taking to jail and let them sneak out of camp, minus their guns, hats and boots.

The Vista Grande postoffice was moved on December 1, 1909, to the building next south of Kielhorne's Vista Grande Pharmacy by Postmaster Ellis C. Johnson, where Mrs. Johnson has opened up a natty little dry goods and notion store.

Jim Callan has one of the greatest curiosities, a double pig, with one head, eight feet and two tails. The pig is well formed and is attracting a good deal of attention.

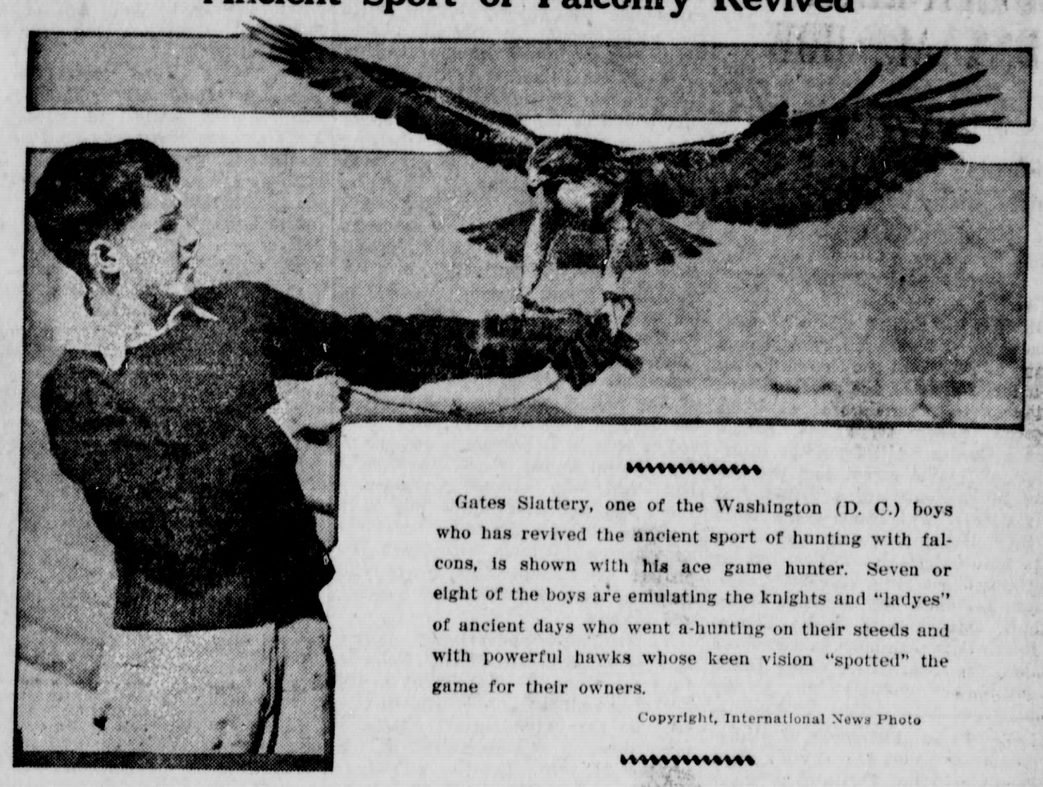
Ancient Sport of Falconry Revived



Gates Slattery, one of the Washington (D. C.) boys who has revived the ancient sport of hunting with falcons, is shown with his ace game hunter. Seven or eight of the boys are emulating the knights and "ladyes" of ancient days who went a-hunting on their steeds and with powerful hawks whose keen vision "spotted" the game for their owners.

TRUE GHOST STORY

By CHICK SALE

© by Public Ledger, Inc.—WNU Service

"There is an old house on an abandoned Vermont farm which is the only place where I have ever come across circumstances which seemed to me supernatural and unexplainable.

"When I was hunting in Vermont for some pieces of early American furniture, I asked my escort, a native of the place, about an abandoned house which we were passing.

"More than fifty years ago a family named Benham had lived in the stone house, he related. The family consisted of Proctor Benham, his wife, a former Boston society girl, and their twin sons. Upon these two handsome boys the family lavished their affections.

"The second floor of the house was given entirely to the boys; the children in the neighborhood loved to come to the playroom, they envied the boys their pleasure. My friend, when he was a boy, had played with the twins in their attic.

"Then one night the two boys disappeared and were seen no more. It was thought they had drowned in a pool in a quarry back of the house. Half mad with grief, the parents moved finally from the stone house with its quiet garret playroom, and it became a truly abandoned Vermont farm, gathering about itself, as the years progressed, a reputation for being haunted.

"All old houses and barns and buildings interest me. Moreover, I was intrigued by the story. I asked my companion to take me into the house to see the locale of the tragedy of other years. As a storm was impending, he agreed to seek shelter within.

"The house proved to be bare of furniture, with one interesting exception. Above the living-room mantel, which itself was partly torn away, was an old oil portrait of two small boys, painted directly on the smooth old plaster of the chimney itself.

"It was a poor effort, but the faces belied the apparent poverty of the painter's talents. They fairly glowed with life and true flesh tones as they smiled out into the barren room where once they had brought such joy.

"My friend told me the history of the painting. Fifty years before a wandering painter had visited the district, begging for work painting the pictures of children. He preferred to paint on plaster rather than canvas.

"My companion said that there had been an ugly rumor to the effect that every family in which the tramp painter was admitted and painted a portrait, had later suffered the loss of a child; this rumor grew after the Benham tragedy.

"The story fascinated me, and I insisted on climbing the stairs. In the attic I found rough boards contrived into a kind of robbers' den; the crossbeam showed worn places where swing ropes had been attached.

"As I came downstairs, I saw it was dark, and that the storm which had threatened was going to break.

"My friend advised that we wait inside until after the storm.

"The storm broke, and I lost sight of the facts which my friend told me, in my ensuing terror.

"Sitting together in the dark, we heard the sound of feet on the floor of the playroom above us. Running feet, stamping feet, undoubtedly children's feet. Above our astonished heads, we heard the creak of swing ropes and the noise of scuffling and wrestling, as though several children were playing, roughly and excitedly.

"Neither of us moved—only once, when a flash of lightning illumined the room momentarily. I was amazed to see that the chimney above the mantel was bare and white; that there was no painted likeness of two children there!

"To my disordered imagination, it now seemed that the hubbub above me increased to an almost unbearable pitch as though dozens of children were playing there, madly, furiously; as though jealous of the passing hours, and anxious to crowd into a brief time all the enjoyment they had missed for years.

"I don't know how my friend and I got out of that house, and into our car in the storm, but we certainly did just that.

"I never returned to it. My friend did, but I was as far away as a fast train could take me.

"He wrote me once about his return trip. He said the painting on the chimney was there, just as it had been for more than fifty years."

Amazon Once a Sea

South America once consisted of three islands, separated by a sea similar to the Mediterranean, said Dr. William M. McGovern, professor of political science at Northwestern university, who recently returned from an exploration of the Amazon jungle. The sea which once divided South America has now become the Amazon river, he said. Doctor McGovern said that within ten miles of Manaos, a modern little city at the extreme end of the Amazon river steamer line, virgin jungle was to be found. Forty miles away, he said, Indians never seen by white man, live.

Makes It Simple to Adjust Light

Motor That Does Away With All Possibility of Straining Eyes.

When you raise your eyes from a brilliantly lighted page, or piece of sewing, to look across a room in semi-darkness, you make your eyes shift gears too suddenly and wear them out. With a warning to check up on the distribution and balance of light in your room, The Parents' Magazine heralds science's latest invention, an amazing little meter that gauges light as a thermometer records the temperature in the home. This meter, which anyone can read, takes all the guesswork out of lighting arrangements and indicates exactly how to place light correctly and adjust it to the task in hand.

Marvelous as the eye is, it has not been able to meet the demands placed upon it. In spite of the fact that most persons are born with normal vision, science offers statistical proof that 20 per cent of school grade children are more or less retarded in advancement by damaged eyesight; that 40 per cent of college students do not see as well as they should; that 60 per cent of men and women in their forties have trouble with their eyes; that at sixty years of age 95 per cent of the population have acute eye strain.

The article goes on to reveal that eye strain was almost unknown when man went to bed when the sun went down, and used his eyes mainly for outdoor tasks. Science places the blame for today's widespread faulty sight upon civilization, which causes our day to last long into the night and necessitates close seeing at low levels of lighting. There is one thing, and one only, to do about it—regulate lighting to individual need and the manner of living.

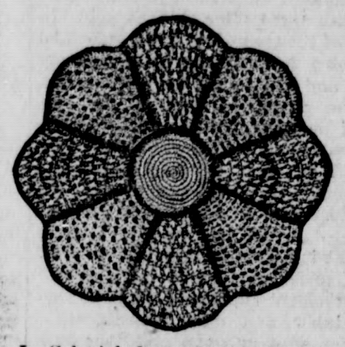
"DRESDEN PLATE" CROCHETED RUG

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



In Colonial days patchwork quilts and rag rugs were very popular. During the past 3 or 4 years patchwork quilts have been the leading item of interest for home art needleworkers. In 1933, when the crocheted rag rug in quilt design appeared, women all over the country took great interest in this new and beautiful way of making rag rugs. The old rugs were either round or oval, crocheted row after row until desired size was obtained. Changing of colors was the only variation. In quilt design rugs many beautiful combinations are possible and the work is really interesting.

Illustration above shows the "Dresden Plate" rug, named after the Dresden Plate or Friendship quilt, a pattern that every woman knows. This rug is another popular pattern, measures 34 inches and can be made from 40 oz. of Grandmother Clark's rag rug strips or 32 oz. of "Linkraft," the new woven material for rag rugs.

Send 15c to our Rug Department and get our book No. 24 showing 20 different crocheted rugs in quilt design in colors with illustrations.

SCOUT TROOP NEWS

One Sunday in November will stand out this year in the minds of a group of scouts who drove down to Sunnyvale to see the Macon. Two hours were spent there and then we drove to Mills Field to see the Ninety-nine Club in action in races and stunts by the women pilots. Mr. and Mrs. E. Harasin, parents of one of the scouts, and Scoutmaster Kramer furnished the machines for the trip.

Football is just about over and the troop has put in a fine time learning the game. We played three games in Daly City, winning both games against Troop 149 of this city by 33-7 and 34-6. The third game was played against Troop 95 of the Sunset District. We lost this game, 24 to 0.

The last game will be with Troop 95 on December 16 at the scout camp.

One of the most active and fast growing squadrons of the Junior Birdmen in the Bay district is made up of scouts of Troop 148, with a hangar at 231 Acton street, where regular meetings are held on the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

The reason the scouts seem so busy in Daly City is because they are go-getters to get material for the new camp they are building. This camp will be a meeting place for all scouts of this city. The boys are thankful to the city leaders for their part in putting over this scout pack.

"CHAINED" PROVES RARE FILM TREAT

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are together again, this time in one of the most powerful dramitic vehicles of the year. The picture, directed by Clarence Brown, is entitled "Chained," and will be playing at the Daly City Theater, Daly City, December 9, 10 and 11. A special Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer production, it is lavishly mounted and painstakingly produced. The swift moving story, following the new trend, was especially written for the screen by Edgar Selwyn and adapted by John Lee Mahin.

Clark Gable and Joan Crawford in "Chained"

The supporting cast is exceptional, with Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor and Marjorie Gateson prominently cast. But chief honors go to the co-stars, who make living characters out of their seperate roles, and weave a deep-hued tapestray of the poignant romance of Diane and Mike.

The locale of the film, evershifting, covers half the Western hemisphere, moving from New York to shipboard, to Buenos Aires, to a South American ranch, back to New York and thus North to a Lake Placid resort. It is the kind of fare critics have been crying for: swift, credible, well mounted well acted and, above all, entertaining.

OPERA STAR TO BE FEATURE AT ANNUAL SHOW

Exhibit Will Be Decidedly Exceptional Exhibition By Local Dealers

The featured atraction of the nineteenth annual Pacific Auto Show, to be held in the San Francisco Civic Auditorium from January 19 to 26, inclusive, wil be Grace Moore, star of the Metropolitan Opera Company and of the film musical hit, "One Night of Love," according to an announcement made here today by George A. Wahlgreen, manager of the coming automotive exposition.

Wahlgreen completed arrangements for the star's appearance at the Auto Show today, after several weeks of preliminary work. It is expected that her guaranteed salary, plus a percentage of the receipts over $40,000, will give her remuneration above that received by Maurice Chevalier when he was the entertainment feature at the Annual San Francisco Motor Car Dealers' Show. Chevalier received $25,000.

Fred W. Pabst, chairman of the show committee, said today that the engagement of Grace Moore is as important as that of Chevalier, who appeared at the Auto Show here two different years. Miss Moore's success in opera and in the picture, which ran for two months at one of the city's leading theaters, places her in the same class as a drawing card with Maurice Chevalier at the peak of his career, or Paul Whiteman, who was a previous San Francisco Auto Show attraction.

The show this year is to be a 100 per cent dealer association affair, it was announced here today by Don Gilmore, president of the San Francisco Motor Car Dealers' Association. No non-member will be allowed to exhibit, and in the case of multiple dealers with a co-operative exhibit, only those who are members of the association will be permitted to have salesmen in attendance. The only exception to this rule will be when a dealer is operating under a distributor who is a member of the association, and the distributor is exhibiting. The dealer then may have his salesmen at the display.

This enforcement of the membership rule will, according to President Gilmore, bring the dealers of San Francisco into closer relationship.

Plans for the show are going forward at a speedy pace, and members of the show committee from the dealers' association—Fred W. Pabst, William L. Hughson and Eaton McMillan—are of the opinion that the 1935 motor mart here will be the most successful held in the West for many years.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Among the many resolutions submitted to the resolutions committee of the National Grange, recently in session at Hartford, Conn., is one urging an increase in the price of gold to $41,34 per ounce. The proposal will be considered by the national convention next week. The recommendation to increase the price of gold to the legal limit was submitted as a means of bringing continued increases in the prices of basic commodities.

J. H. Wheeler, president of the White Pass and Yukon Route, who has returned south after spending the summer months at Skagway, believes Interior Alaska and Yukon Territory will be invaded next year by an army of miners and prospectors and that next spring will witness a renewal of the gold fever of the Klondike days.

According to reports from Seward, another find of gold on the beach below Ninilchik, in Cook Inlet, is causing prospectors to search for the mother lode back from the shore. The find was reported by Ted Crawford and John Kelly. A few weeks ago Frank Cooper washed twelve ounces of placer gold from the beach.

of Nome and the Seward Peninsula

Charley Ross, oldtime mining man section, return edrecently to Seattle from a summer spent on the mining properties of the E. T. Fisher Co. at Casper, Wyo., and reports a satisfactory season. The crew moved 400,000 cubic yards of muck and gravel this summer in spite of the fact that there was a shortage of water and an extremely dry season. The crew is stripping for next year's work and will continue until weather prevents further operations.

While snow and winter weather is bringing about a cessation of work in some of the properties at Nuka Bay, near Seward, for this year, a number of them are planning on working all winter in the hopes of either having the properties in shape to start shipping in the spring or at any rate installing small milling units. L. L. Pomeroy has arrived in town from the down bay camp to secure an outfit and will return to spend the winter prospecting on some showings that he has discovered this year.

When the auditor for the Railway Express Agency made a recent trip through the Territory, L. L. Trimble found a great revival of mining activity in every section. The quartz property near Carmack in Y. T., the silver camps at Mayo and Dawson properties were all active. Dawson has had plenty of water this year—in fact, at times too much. The Cowden dredge near Eagle was about ready to operate and at Coal Creek, between Eagle and Circle, drilling operations were in progress.

From Happy Valley to Homer miners are reported as cleaning up two or three dollars per day mining on the beach sands of Cook Inlet. One having outstanding success is Knute Armstrong of Ninilchik, who after being active in fish operations for a few seasons is now turning his hand to the line of work which originally brought him to Alaska.

TAX CLEARANCE NEEDED TO GET LICENSE PLATES

Motor Vehicle Department Outlines Regulation For Issuance Under Law

The opening of the period for the state Department of Motor Vehicles to receive applications for 1935 license plates by mail has caused Russell Bevans, registrar of vehicles, to call public attention to the new law which requires a tax clearance on all cars before a license can be issued.

While the department began receiving applications by mail only at the Sacramento headquarters on December 1, and will not begin counter deliveries until January 2, some confusion is being experienced and more is anticipated as a result of lack of familiarity by the automobile owning public with the new law, which was passed by the 1933 legislature and is effective for the first time with the 1935 registration period.

Under this law the owner must have the county, city and county and city assessor, as the case may be, stamp the back of the registration card to show that the personal property tax has been paid on the vehicle.

In the case of persons who do not own real property the tax clearance is obtained from the assessors either at the time of paying the personal property tax on the car or at a later date in the year upon exhibiting the proper tax receipts to the assesors.

In the case of persons who do own real property the tax clearance is obtained from the assessors at the time of paying the personal property tax or declaring it a lien on the real property, or at a later date in the year upon exhibiting the proper evidence to the assessors.

The Department of Motor Vehicles or any agency issuing license plates cannot accept a tax receipt or any other evidence of tax payment in lieu of the assessor's clearance stamp on the back of the registration card.

In the case of a car being purchased since March 5, 1934, the tax clearance is printed in red letters across the back of the registration card.

Bevans advises the public that the simplest and most convenient method of obtaining the 1935 license plates is to mail the registration card with proper tax clearance stamp on the reverse side to the Sacramento headquarters along with a money order, bank draft or certified check for $3 to cover the registration fee. Do not send cash or currency. The plates will be mailed to the applicant immediately after the holidays.

Speedometer Cable

At intervals of not more than five or six thousand miles the speedometer cable should be removed, cleaned thoroughly and treated with fresh lubricant, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

service work is a profession and the workers require training and experience. It is our plan to place all the trained and experienced social workers, no matter where they come from. We need them and are even tapping the field of those former workers who are now married and retired. We will gladly give jobs to any and all who can qualify. Many local residents formerly connected with this work failed to meet the requirements set up for these social service workers, and consequently it was deemed necessary that they be replaced by other trained workers."

County Agricultural Commissioner Max Leonard was given permission to attend an agricultural convention on December 17 in Riverside.

The supervisors were informed the assessed valuation of San Mateo County is only about 26.92 per cent of the actual valuation. It was pointed out that this is the lowest perentage, with one exception, of any county in this state and well below the average.

Numerous work relief projects, including construction of the Colma Creek drainage canal, Ralston avenue cutoff and storm drains on Warren road in San Mateo, came before the board for approval. Supervisor A. J. Witt of the First District objected to consideration by the supervisors, and offered a motion that the matters be referred to the county executive. His motion was adopted and hereafter the county executive will have the final word on all work relief recommendations. Supervisor Witt argued that any approval by another body of the jobs meant usurpation of the executive officer's duties.

Attorney Wade, who represented San Mateo County at the Railroad Commission rapid transit hearings in San Francisco, requested that Hugh R. Pomeroy, county planning adviser, and County Clerk E. B. Hinman be authorized to offer testimony at the hearings. Mr. Hinman is chairman of the Peninsula Chambers of Commerce rapid transit committee.

The supervisors added the names of Mrs. Ella Chase, Alvin S. Hatch and George Dunn to the committee appointed last week to study a city and county governmental setup for this county.

ordered forwarded to the board and the principal for their hearty co-operation in the matter.

Principal Ferguson stated to the committee that hereafter no cars will be allowed to be repaired by the students unless the autos belong to the student or to their immediate family.

The business agent stated he had encountered some difficulty in securing new members owing to the fact that the objects of the organization were not thoroughly understood. The matter developed into a general discussion. Members of the association pointed out that many public improvements and betterments were due to the efforts of the organization, such as street lights, paving sidewalks, establishment of regulatory ordinances, the widening of highways, and many other things to the benefit of the community as a whole.

A donation was made to the uniform fund of the Daly City Band. It was stated that our band is one of a limited number invited to appear in the pageant at the Shrine East-West football game on New Year's Day. It was said it is also probable that the band will be asked to play soon over the N. B. C. radio network.
